“Joshee, I hate that this happened. You were one of my very first friends when I moved to South Carolina. You came to my thirtieth birthday party after we just met, and celebrated every birthday with me after. August was our favorite month because our birthdays were back to back. I would tease and call you my big baby brother. Because you are. My brother. We told everyone in middle school that we were siblings—and everyone believed us. In high school, you stuck by me and had my back. You always had an listening ear for me. A shoulder for me to lean on. You always carried me up when I needed you the most.

When mama would give me rides home from school, I remember you just got your permit and she let you drive us home. I got to sit in the front and we just had a blast. You took us on what felt like Mr. Toads wild ride especially making that dang sharp left turn on Jefferson Rd.

I'm going to miss sitting in the garage with you, the golf cart rides around the community, or showing up with whatever I had baked that day.

Thank you for showing me so much love and kindness. Thank You for loving me as your sister. Thank you for being my person in school. Thank you for being my big baby brother.

I love you, joshee.
