“ When I was a kid, our family went to South Carolina to visit with Uncle Sam and Aunt Mary. Uncle Sam dealt in sporting goods at the time and he asked my brother and I what sports we were playing in school. Being Summer, we knew that football was up next in the Fall, so we said football. Uncle Sam sent us back to Greencastle with new football gear and new Riddell helmets. I was the only kid on my 7th grade football team with a white helmet. Every time another kid would ask me why my helmet was different than the other players, I would proudly say - it is from my Uncle Sam.

A few Summers ago, Uncle Sam and Aunt Mary visited Amber, Wilson and Leo at our cabin in Greencastle. He took the time to get to know our two boys and upon returning to SC, he sent Wilson new running shoes and Leo a box of art supplies. Somethings never change. He cared about our next generation of Heckos, McCanns and Hatchers.

Uncle Sam - Your kindness, voice and unrelenting sense of personal history will never be forgotten. Thank you for allowing us to be a part of your life.

“ Once upon a time, there were seven children born to a Czech police officer and his artist wife. Two girls were first and then five boys. Blond hair and blue eyes, brown hair and blue eyes, and brown hair and brown eyes distinguished them.

They were all taller than their colleagues and were highly opinionated about all matters. Sam was child number seven and eventually became an only child when his older siblings left home for college, military service, or jobs.

He became the family chronicler reminding us of important family occasions. He was also a talented artist who wove exquisite baskets, perfectly shaped, colored, and useful.

He leaves behind his own remarkable family who will mourn him as they remember him.

Sam, we love you and honor you. We will miss you terribly.

Mary, I just now read of Sam's death. You are in my prayers for God's peace. One of Lamar's prized possessions was one of Sam's exquisite baskets which was his magazine holder sitting beside his lift chair.
