“ I had the privilege of getting to know her and telling a brief part of her story for People magazine. Stephanie was remarkable- incredibly gracious and upbeat- so vibrant and strong in the face of what she was fighting. I was so lucky to get to know her. I am so sorry that she's gone.

“ This sadeness my heart. Stephanie was my small group leader when I was around 14/15 for a few years. I remember her love, her smile, her devotion to Jesus, her willingness to have hard conversations. She was beautiful, inside and out. She never gave up on inspiring girls to be like Jesus. I think about her often. She was brave, strong, and a follower of Jesus. She has beat this cancer, and now she is home. Paul says we don't grieve as the world grieves. This is a sad and hard time. But family, remember to keep your hope in Jesus. Praying for you all.

I will always miss you Stephanie. Thank you for your investment into my life.

Stephanie was such an inspiration to my daughter who is also fighting glioblastoma. Maggie followed her on FB, and we also traveled to Duke to see if the polio vaccine was an option for her, but it was not. I am so happy that it gave Stephanie this extra time with you and allowed her to marry and become a nurse. But my heart is full of sadness for all of you dealing with this tremendous loss. Wishing all of you strength and peace.
